easter thoughts

"It's Friday, but Sunday's a comin'!" is a poem by S. M. Lockridge who was a powerful and passionate African - American preacher.

You can hear him reciting this on YouTube if you want to find it on the internet. (www.youtube.com/watch?v=YByT6wfdhJs).

I adapted it to be read on Easter Sunday morning. In our daily Holy Week services we had been through the struggles and sadness and despair leading to Good Friday. So I tried to put it into the joyful context of Easter Day. It brings the cross sharply into focus in the light of Jesus rising again from the dead to bring us the gift of eternal life. I am printing it here, praying that it will shine the glorious hope of the resurrection into each of us.

It's Friday, but Sunday's a comin'!

"When it's Friday you can't believe that Sunday's Coming!" While it's Friday, Jesus is praying, Peter's sleeping, Judas is betraying, and it seems impossible that Sunday's coming. On Friday, Pilate's struggling, The Council is conspiring and the crowd is vilifying. They have no idea that Sunday's coming. While it's still Friday the Disciples are running like sheep without a shepherd. Mary's crying. Peter is denying. But that's because they don't know that Sunday's coming. On Friday the Romans beat my Jesus. They robed him in scarlet. They crowned him with thorns. But they didn't know that Sunday was coming. On Friday they saw Jesus walking to Calvary. His blood dripping, his body stumbling and his spirit burdened. But you see that's because it was only Friday and they couldn't see Sunday coming. While it's Friday the world is winning, people are sinning and the devil is grinning. It was Friday when the soldiers nailed my Saviour's hands to the cross. They nailed my Saviour's feet to the cross, and then they raised him up between criminals. That was Friday. Jesus had said that Sunday was coming. But while it's still only Friday the disciples are questioning what has happened to their King. And the Pharisees are celebrating that their scheming has been achieved. You see they don't know It's only Friday and Sunday is coming. On Friday he was hanging on the cross, feeling forsaken by His Father, left alone and dying,

and nobody could save Him? That was Friday. But Sunday was coming. That was Friday when the earth trembled, the sky grew dark, and my King yielded his spirit. That was Friday, when all hope seemed lost. Death had won, sin had conquered, and Satan was just laughing. That was Friday. Jesus was buried, a soldier stood guard, and a rock was rolled into place to seal his life for ever. But that was Friday. That was only Friday. And Sunday came, and the world was changed, and we were changed too!

womens world day of prayer

Many thanks to everybody who supported us when the Women's World Day of Prayer was held in church on Friday 4 March and this year the country under the spotlight was Cuba. Although we host this only once every three years, it is a bit of a worry so we found it very reassuring when the pews began to fill up and we had a pleasant, friendly and, hopefully informative, afternoon. Everyone seemed to enjoy our refreshments which, at the beginning of the service, were based (lightly) on Cuban specialities.

Special thanks to Greta for making all of those macaroons, Christine for her musical support and to Rev Ian Davies for reading the meditation so thoughtfully.

The collection raised the splendid sum of £115.22 which has been sent to help the Women's World Day of Prayer in its work of raising awareness of the lives of Christian women in other countries.

my magic box

Please find below a lovely and imaginative verse that was written by Catherine Levy's Great Grandson at school. When he and his classmates were asked, by their teacher to make a list of some of the things they might put in a "Magic Box" . . .

I will put in my box

A unusual wand from an ancient Wizard

A tusk from the biggest Indian elephant to ever roam the land

A tip of a thirsty tongue touching the water

I will put in my box

A snowflake freshly fallen from the night sky

The first feather of a flaming phoenix

A first breath from a new born baby

I will put in my box

Two bright red poppies from the biggest poppy field

The last word from a loved one

The first animal to set foot on the earth.

I will put in my box

A thirteenth month and a blue moon

A police officer in a UFO and

A alien in a police car.

My box is fashioned from gold, silver and bronze

Its hinges are made from the hardest steal

The lid is made of the smoothest ice.

I shall swim in my box through the Indian Ocean

I shall be washed ashore to a smugglers cave

Where I will bathe in the sun!

egg-citing fun on easter day

After a series of thoughtful and moving services during Holy Week (Thank you Ian) we arrived at an “eggs-citing” Easter day morning and were greeted by a beautiful sunny blue sky along with a church full of children’s happy voices and many a “Happy Easter” greetings to one another — Milda Small arrived with several baskets of colourfully decorated eggs, many thanks to those who helped her the previous week with some imaginative decorating.

The “cross” had been positioned outside for all to see and decorated beautifully, thank you ladies you know who you are. Pat

Turner arrived with her Simnel cake which she placed on its own table waiting to be cut up and eagerly consumed with a cup of coffee as folk waited for their turn to roll eggs down the aisle. After the morning service, during which our wonderful choir had sung so majestically, the aisle was lined with paper to help the eggs roll towards their goal, the end of the pews. There followed lots of “oohs” and “aahs” as some eggs made their way down the aisle knocking others out of the way, while some had other ideas and disappeared into the pews! The youngsters led the way first, some with a little help as they “egg-citedly” let go of their eggs and told them to keep going.

The not so young followed some with equal success, or not, as those before, concentration as eggs were spoken to with encouragement to make that journey to the winning post — many ran out of “yolk” and stopped short while others had to much and carried on into the crowd. Finally a winner was identified (he had put his initials on the egg - good thinking!!) and to applause he was presented with his prize by Michael O’Brien, kindly donated by Milda Small.

Finally with folk suitably refreshed and entertained they made their way out to enjoy the remainder of a beautiful sunny Easter Day with family and friends and just possibly some chocolate eggs!!

We are pleased to announce that £200 was raised half of which will go towards our support for South Tyneside Churches Alzheimer’s Awareness project. Thank you to all who came along.

Happy Easter to you all.

happy memories

Not so long ago we were all shouting about Christmas, now we are going wild about Easter.

I must say that I have very happy memories of Easters past. How I used to look forward to seeing Maynard's sweet shop window display. Each year they seemed to get a larger Easter Egg than the year before. Just imagine a chocolate Easter Egg about three foot high with a large spray of red roses and a huge red ribbon tied around the middle and masses of little fluffy yellow chickens scattered around it.

If you bought a 6d chocolate egg in that shop the lady behind the counter printed your name on it. I remember her having a sheet of paper with names printed upon it so that she wouldn't spell a name wrongly.

Do you remember getting a ride down to South Shields on the Marsden Rattler and marching down to the Market behind your

Marsden Rattler arriving at "Marsden Cottage" stop

Chapel banner?
Goodness there must have been two thousand people taking part in the hymns and prayers, every child was given an orange.

My Grandma Cauwood always boiled three dozen eggs for Easter Sunday and anyone could walk into the kitchen and take one, each egg was painted a different colour.

Almost every Easter I was bought a new straw hat decorated with flowers and tied under my chin. Another thing I remember were the flower ladies, who sold a little bunch of primroses for 1d or 2d for snowdrops.

Do you remember the special teatime spread when the whole family took part in it, happy days, remembered well.

Mary Stephenson

P.S. Now how could I ever forget the Miners Band that played in the Shields Park that afternoon.

bishop paul's easter message

Please find below Bishop Paul's Easter message to us all with a theme of "it's all about the smell." He said . . .

It smells wonderful' were the words uttered as the aroma of the Sunday roast hit us when we opened the front door. It's horrible when we are so full of cold that we can't smell. Smell matters; aromas remind us of people, of places and of events. We like to smell nice. Our region used to be filled with the smells of coal and heavy industry alongside those of farming.

There are smells that I associate with Easter. I love the smell of the spices in Hot Cross Buns. Really good chocolate smells wonderful, as well as tasting good. And then for me there is the smell of scented oil poured on the heads of those I confirm at the dawn service in Durham Cathedral.

It is this last smell that takes me back into the Easter story itself. During his last few days Jesus spent the day in Jerusalem teaching but each evening he went out to stay with his friends in the village of Bethany. On one evening Mary, the sister of Martha and Lazarus did something that was unexpected, and which scandalised Jesus' disciples. She took a jar of expensive perfume and poured it out on Jesus head and feet.

The whole house was filled with the aroma. It was like she had taken a whole large bottle of Chanel and in one go used the whole bottle. It was extravagant. It was an act of love. Whilst Jesus' disciples all thought about how the money it was worth could have been used to help the poor Jesus welcomed it as a love token ahead of his death. Somehow Mary, unlike almost everyone else, had some sense of the imminence of Jesus' death. Jesus interpreted it as his being anointed ready for burial.

The quantity was so great that it might be that as he hung on the Cross something of that aroma, now mixed with sweat, blood and dust, was still in his hair and still rising from his feet. The aroma still spoke to him.

Jesus' burial had to be rushed at the end of the Friday. So as soon as the sabbath was over some of the women closest to Jesus went to the tomb carrying more anointing oil and spices ready to finish the burial rites. They wanted the body to smell good. This too was to

Jesus' death, his giving up of his life for us all, is the most extravagant love gift the world has ever known. Like the perfume poured out he poured out his life in love for us all, to bring us back into friendship with God.

It is this extravagance of love that I reflect on this Easter. We all need to know that we are loved, loved extravagantly. We all need to be people who love extravagantly. In an era when we hear so much about austerity, about reducing and cutting we need to smell the joy and life of abundance, generosity and extravagance. Love which gives and gives and gives again. Love towards those in deepest need in our world, whether they be asylum seekers and refugees, the severely disabled, those caught up in violence or trapped in abusive relationships, we need to recover the place and value of generosity and extravagance.

We need to smell the aroma of God's love and let it bring us to life.

racing success

Whitburn Parish Church's St Patrick's Race Night was a galloping success for all who attended and raised over £1,500 for the Church maintenance and renovation fund. Punters, including some dressed for the occasion, enjoyed ten races with pre-brought horses on which they could place bets. Then owner of the winning horse in each race received a bottle of whisky. The eleventh race attracted buyers for eight horses, with a first prize of £50 won by The Cruisers. A Pie and Peas Supper provided by Whitburn Caterers rounded off a very successful evening of entertainment. Thank you to local businesses and residents who sponsored races and bought advertising, everyone who bought horses, friends who helped with organisation beforehand and during the evening and all who attended, losing their shirts for this good cause.

We are also very grateful to local businesses and residents, whose sponsorship of races and advertisements raised £325 of the total sum.

ninety years young

Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II will be ninety years young later this year and below you may find some interesting facts about her reign as our monarch.

A recent television documentary was shown after the film crew were given access to the Queen's life for a year and involved her attending public events to simply relaxing at home. A fascinating and informative programme which gave us a little insight into the world of Her Majesty after she swore an oath of dedication, all those years ago and at such a young age. But also showed her knack for taking nothing too seriously - appearing to be happy and glorious.

There can't be many ninety year olds that still continue to ride out most weekends - although she also knows her limits! When Her Majesty was told by an aide that the weather forecast didn't favour riding the Queen promptly admitted "It's quite difficult at this time of year. . . and I'm rather a fair weather rider at the moment. I don't like getting cold and wet." There were some amusing parts such as the camera picking up on a cushion in her study with the slogan "It's good to be Queen" . . .

Her majesty has given regular audiences to 12 Prime Ministers
Can you name them ?

Her Majesty has attended every opening of Parliament except for two years - 1959 and 1963
Do you know why she didn't attend?

Her Majesty has answered around 3,500,000 items of correspondence.

Her Majesty has sent approximately 45,000 Christmas cards
during her reign.

Her Majesty's first Commonwealth tour as Queen began on 24th November 1953 and covered 43,618 miles.

Her Majesty's first football match was the 1953 FA Cup Final.

Her Majesty has launched 21 ships during her reign.

Her Majesty has sat for 129 portraits during her reign.

Her Majesty, in an average year, will host more than 50,000 people at Buckingham Palace through banquets; lunches; dinners; receptions and garden parties.

Her Majesty was born on 21st April 1926 - at 17 Bruton Street, London W1

Her Majesty learnt to drive in 1945.

Her Majesty has owned more than 30 corgis during her reign.

Her Majesty has 30 godchildren.

Her Majesty got her first corgi on her 18th birthday.

Her Majesty's first corgi was called "Susan"

Her Majesty's current corgis are called "Monty, Willow and Holly."

Her Majesty married Duke of Edinburgh on 20th November 1947 and todate they have been married for 68 years.

costly battle one hundred years on

The Battle of the Somme began in July one hundred years ago — A bloody and costly battle which turned out to be a diversionary attack after the German army were attacking Verdun in February 1916 and soon became clear that France would not be able to lead any major offensive that year — It was decided that a British diversionary attack was needed fast to take the pressure off the French and divert German resources from Verdun. . .

The Battle of the Somme began on 1st July 1916 after 8 days of allied artillery bombardment – the like of which had not been seen before.

Many of the soldiers that went over the top were under the impression that the enemy would be dead, dying or desperate to surrender when they arrived at the German front line trench system. However, that was not quite the case and that first day remains the darkest in British Army's history.

Britain lost 60,000 casualties (killed/wounded) on first day of the battle.

Between the 24th June and 30th June there was a continual British artillery bombardment onto the German front line, it had been initially planned for 5 days but was extended for a full 7 days.

1,600 pieces of British Artillery fire
1.73 million shells on to the German lines.

Then on Saturday 1st July zero hour 07.30 the British infantry began their attack along a front of about 18 miles from the attack on Gommecourt village on the left wing to attack on Montauban on the right wing.

Over 100,000 British infantrymen started from assembled positions in the British forward lines.- but many had been wounded/killed before even crossing “no man's land” – the gap between the opposing front lines.

The average British infantryman carried 30kgs of equipment as he went over the top during the first phase of the battle.

Small gains of ground were made north of the Albert-Bapaume road.

South of this road the British did achieve significant success on the

costly battle one hundred years on front between Mametz and Maricourt – as troops from 18th and 30th Divisions successfully reached their objective by the end of the day.

But due to the tragedy of the first day – heavy losses; limited gains to capture ground; the attempt to push Germans back from their well defended Somme front was continued. They were only in a position to regroup the units still available and had to narrow their objectives and take locations one by one.

The intent of the British was to attack and take control of a 24km stretch of the River Somme. By the end of the Battle the Allied forces had won 7 miles (12kms) of ground.

During the Battle 51 Victoria Crosses were awarded 17 of which were awarded posthumously
31 won by NCO's (Non-commissioned officers)
20 won by Officers.

The battle lasted from July to November due to worsening winter weather and the battle drew to a close and officially ended on the 18th November 1916.

There are over 250 military cemeteries on the Somme battlefields

There is a huge red coloured piece of architecture called the Thielval Memorial that stands on part of the Somme battlefield which has to be visited to remind us of this bloody and costly Battle. The monument can be seen for miles and is now nestled in and amongst trees.

Oldest British soldier to die was Lt Henry Webber of 7th South Lancashire Regiment
He was 68 when he died on 27th July 1916

As you arrive and walk towards it there is a silence among the many visitors with just a wind that whistles through you which makes you involuntarily shake for just a moment. A strange and eerie feeling surrounds and descends as you wonder amongst the well kept grave stones that stand in neat rows looking at the names, ages and many different regiments and units as you stand with others but in a world of your own.

costly battle one hundred years on

It certainly had quite an emotional effect on me when I visited it as part of a trip visiting some of the many military cemotaries (a couple of years ago now - but as I write this it is as vivid as if I were back there now.) A journey that I am very glad I made, with a group of friends, and one that will remain with me for the rest of my life.
